

Kindly remember that our ability to fly on any given day is entirely weather dependent. Despite any prediction we make the day before regarding a potential flight the next morning, remember it is only our best guess. In many, if not most instances, the decision to fly on any given morning can only be made just moments before we are able to take-off. This means that the possibility always exists that viewers could make the trip to the Arrival Flyover site at St. Marks only to learn that we could not fly. Thank you for understanding.
